Work! Work! Work!

"BY THE SWEAT OF THY BROW SHALT THOU EARN THY BREAD" was the sentence handed out to Adam when he lost his job in the apple orchard.

The sentence was tempered with mercy, however, for Eve went with him, and he was not required to work all the time.

THE BUSINESS MEN OF HONOLULU ARE SERVING THEIR SENTENCES, sweat and all, these August days; but they are over-doing it.

"ALL WORK AND NO PLAY MAKES JACK A DULL BOY."

OUR ADVICE TO YOU IS:

Buy yourself and Eve a ticket by next Mauna Kea, come to Hilo and REST AND PLAY A MONTH.

Cool weather, new scenes, good service, cheap rates.

In the long run you will do more work, make more money, and be a better citizen for it.

PARTIES ON PORCH OR LAWN

Refreshments for porch and lawn parties may be served in a variety of ways. If the porch is large enough to permit, the dining-room table may be used, or if the porch is long and narrow, several small tables are more convenient. A sheltered spot should be chosen where the guests do not have to sit in the hot sun or in full view of the passersby. If the porch is not desirable, the table or tables may be set under shade trees. Out-of-door refreshments may be so nicely served without tables that these may be dispensed with altogether if desired. Table service demands more formality and work, so the hostess who wishes to "simplify" will introduce some novel way of serving the refreshments. One ingenious hostess gave a cafeteria Sunday night tea to unexpected company. The food was prepared and left in the kitchen. The plates, paper napkins, silver, etc., were piled on a side table, and the guests were invited to help themselves. The plates were then carried to convenient seats. The small boy of the family served the drink and brought fresh supplies of bread, cake, etc.

This same plan was nicely utilized by another hostess for invited guests. Each gentleman was given a menu card and told to go to the kitchen and find all dishes on his card. The hostess sat on the porch with the ladies of the company, while the gentleman arranged a plate for himself and one for his lady. The food was found in different places—all the cold things in the ice-box, the hot things on the stove, and bread, cakes, etc., in their usual places. There was general merrymaking and vying with each other as to who should get the like to take it—advertisement.

OUTLOOK FOR FALL FASHIONS

The continued vogue of silks through the summer is in a measure counterbalanced by the prospect that certain cotton fabrics will be worn very late in the fall, possibly even through the winter. Many of the heavy, rough-surfaced cottons are almost undistinguishable from their woolen prototypes, and certainly will be more inviting with the braiding days of autumn than they were in spring. Many of the sponge cloths, the cotton plushes and velvets, the hot-looking, dark rattans—all these may realize the predictions now freely hazarded of an all-the-year-round vogue.

American buyers who have been dipping into the foreign silk markets have been ordering extensively of the metallic fabrics which were so successful last winter. This means that they anticipate a continuation of the gorgeous effects which made last season a notable one. Certainly there is every present indication that their judgment is not far wrong. Shades of silver tissue are one of the most recent novelties and metallic embroideries are steadily multiplying.

Pearl embroidery has been one of the most striking features of the more elaborate costumes this summer. And while bugles and rhinestones have taken second place, that was perhaps only natural. Pearls are more appropriate to the simpler frocks. But the string of brilliants as an edging for short sleeves and the decolette corsage is decidedly in favor; and it is probable that as the season advances we shall see a revival, even an accentuated one, of the gorgeous, glittering effects of last winter.

But the newest products for evening are more likely to depend for effect on the magnificence of the actual material of the dress. We shall have superb brocades. That is certain. And since the combination of the two in the same costume is repugnant to the artistic sense, the beaded and bugled nets will find their days numbered.

As time goes on we are discovering that the spring did present us with at least one quite radical departure, and that the idea it involved is proving a very persistent one. This is the idea of the composite costume; that is to say, the costume which either is divided quite frankly between absolutely different materials or is worn with a contrasting coat or coat.

The coatee has been the most picturesque note this summer, and will continue to lend charm to the autumn ensemble. Women are only just beginning to realize its charm as well as its practical usefulness, and it isn't likely that they will give it up after this mere taste. One does not need to be a prophet of unusual gifts to foresee that the little coats of silk, tulle de jony, and mousseline will find their successors in velvet and rich brocades. Meanwhile, these dainty casaquins, as the French call certain of the garments we include under the general name of coatee, are produced in charming variety.

Here is a hint for the woman with a sewing machine: A taffeta giraffe seen recently with a costume of white charmeuse and lace was made in the following manner: Strips of the taffetas were sewed together in one of the openwork seams which are so universal this year. These seams were cut carefully down the middle, and presto! there were the desired pique edges! The same thing can be done with other materials, also.

Sashes of flowered mousseline de sole are used on many lingerie frocks.

Califene

Califene, like a good-natured girl, makes hosts of friends wherever introduced.

First you meet her in the store where her Chaperon puts her through various fancy paces to show you what she can do.

In your own house she is just as willing to make the tastiest, crispest pastries you ever ate, if you'll follow the simple directions in the Califene Cook book.

Take Califene home with you, or telephone and the grocer's boy will be proud to bring her; she's the sort that makes people enjoy life.

Califene cooks without butter, and that's economy.

EDUCATION COSTS $26.44 A HEAD, SAYS REPORT

Education in the public schools of the islands during the last year cost the territory $26.44 per pupil, or a grand total of $677,799.72 for 25,631 students. Such are the figures shown in the educational portion of the governor's annual report.

The statistical portion of this report, published in the Star-Bulletin some time ago, showed that the Japanese pupils far exceeded those of any other nationality. The financial portion of the report, now completed, shows that the expense to the territory in educating the 4454 Japanese children in the last year was $261,963.75. The cost per pupil for the year was reduced just nine cents from the expense of the previous year.

Yet the entire cost of education, including actual maintenance and the construction of new buildings and improvements went even higher, reaching the grand total of $948,541.50, or a rate of $36.93 per pupil. The figures for the previous year were $722,912.57, or $30.43 per pupil; while those of the year before that were $483,594.60, or $25.48 per student.

The open air girl is not content merely to have a colored crepe de chine handkerchief tucked into the breast pocket of her knitted or fleecy golf coat, but she must have a bow at her throat to match it exactly in color. These sets are made in the prettiest shades of blue, mauve and canary.
